Lloyd George Cautioned all Humanitarians to Keep Out

This is what Great Britain thinks about any peace proposals which "well-meaning" neutrals might make at this time. The quotation is from an interview given by David Lloyd George

Under the circumstances the British, now that the fortunes of the game have turned a bit, are not disposed to stop because of the squealing done by the Germans, or for the Germans by well-meaning, but misguided, sympathizers and humanitarians. . . Germany elected to make it a finish fight with England. . . . Now we intend to see that Germany has her way; the fight must be to a finish -to a knockout. . . The whole world, including neutrals of the highest purpose and humanitarians with the best motives, must know that there can be no outside interference at this stage. Britain asked no intervention when she was not prepared to fight. She will tolerate none now that she is prepared until Prussian military despotism is broken beyond repair. . . . Peace now or at any time before the final and complete elimination of this menace is unthinkable. No man and no nation with the slightest understanding of the temper of this citizen army of Britain's . . . will attempt to call a halt at this stage.
